Syed Haider Raza, (1922), is one of the most prominent Indian artists living today. As the original member of the Progressive Artists Group, Raza has shaped the face of Modernism in India with his own unique vision and style. In the course of a career spanning seven decades, Raza has dedicated himself to a quest for vital forms that convey his earliest memories of cosmic expanse, language and silence.

The circle or Bindu has become more of an icon, sacred in its symbolism, and placing his work in an Indian context. To Raza, painting is akin to the meditative practice of japa, the fully-engaged repetition of a mantra, until it is deepened and concentrated into a pathway of energy. By pushing his work towards a meditative space, Raza's body of work engages in a timeless convergence between outer and inner worlds.
